WHY HIRE FROM THE GABELLI SCHOOL OF BUSINESS?

As the Jesuit university of New York, Fordham produces business graduates who are different from their peers. They feel strongly that business leadership should be—and can be—ethical and noble. They know how to win without pushing others down. And, through their Fordham education, they come to value “business with purpose,” prioritizing the needs of their employers, their society, and their world.

ACADEMIC APPROACH

All Gabelli School students develop teamwork skills, cultivate leadership qualities, and confront complex ethical questions. The applied approach of Fordham coursework reflects the challenges of the real world, preparing our graduates to begin to contribute from their first day on the job. Undergraduate and graduate students, no matter what their specific major or program, are linked by the philosophy that Fordham graduates have the responsibility to use their business education to make a difference.

ALUMNI

Gabelli School students become part of a network of 180,000 Fordham University alumni worldwide, about 35,000 of whom are graduates of the bachelor’s or master’s programs in business. The Gabelli School careers team welcomes inquiries from companies and organizations that seek to hire experienced Fordham alumni; our staff are also available to facilitate such recruiting beyond the student level.
